Prior to the advent of government-sponsored airmail in Canada, tiny private firms offered airmail service to remote regions, and issued semi-official airmail stamps that were tolerated by Canadian postal authorities on regular mail (provided that adequate postage was paid in the usual way). Here are two nondenominated fee-paid semi-official airmail stamps, a 1930 (10c) Commercial Airways Ltd. stamp and a 1932 (10c) stamp for Canadian Airways Ltd. Both served small mining communities in the North.
